

Crackets continued.

As a grandparent, you can't show any favouritism towards any of the grandbairns, so having made a cracket for one grandchild...

I obviously had to make one for all.

The latter three from elm. My mortice and tenon cutting was well out of practice, and I had to slacken the joints to get them to fit, which in turn created gaps. Rather than experiment with sawdust and glue as filler, I cut and glued small wedges into the gaps:

You really can't tell

I now just have to wait for the travel restrictions to be lifted to get them delivered!

Question:.....Is the smaller footstool a crackette?